

- 1 In Saint Paul's Cathedral in London, visitors can climb stairs so as to walk around the inside of the great dome, which is 60 metres (200 feet) across. This ledge (or balcony) is called the Whispering Gallery because the sound from someone's whisper bounces back from the smooth walls of the dome. Even someone whispering on the other side of the dome can be heard if people listen close to the wall.
- 2 It was whilst on this Whispering Gallery just over a hundred years ago that a poor shoemaker whispered to his girlfriend that he didn't have enough money to buy leather to make shoes, and so didn't have enough money for them to get married.
- 3 On the other side of the dome someone heard the whispering of the couple and decided he would help them. He followed the shoemaker from a distance to find out where he lived, and then he paid for some leather and arranged for it to be sent anonymously to the shoemaker's shop. Everything went well because the shoemaker was then able to make enough money from his shop, and so the couple were able to marry.
- 4 It was a few years later that they found out who it was who had helped them. It was the Prime Minister, William Gladstone, and today was the day of his death in 1898.
- 5 Let us pray:

Lord, most of us
will not become well-known or be written about
because of great achievements, but we will be known and loved for our attitude
and the smaller ordinary things that we do that make our part of the world a better place.

Inspire us, Lord, each day, to find joy in giving
as well as in receiving,
and lead us to act justly,
love tenderly,
and walk humbly with you, our God.
Amen.
