- 1 It was under the leadership of Mahatma Gandhi and his practice of “passive resistance” that India achieved her independence from Great Britain in 1947.
- 2 In his autobiography, Gandhi talks of his days as a student in South Africa, feeling drawn to Jesus and the practice of Christianity. And so he set out one Sunday to go to a Christian church. There, at the entrance to the church, he was told that, if he wanted to attend a service, he must do so in a church reserved for black people, and not in that church building which only white people were allowed to attend. Gandhi no longer felt drawn to Christianity!
- 3 There is a saying that “I might be the only gospel that others will read today.”
- 4 Let us pray:

Inspire us, Lord,
to take the gospel more seriously,
that we may be credible witnesses
of your love. Amen.
